THE latest stage in the South Quay office development in Doncaster has been completed.

The space at the GMI Property Company's Grade A office building has been taken by Clyde Bergemann Materials Handling, part of an international group of companies that provides clean energy solutions to the global power generation industry.

Once finished, the South Quay scheme will comprise more than 100,000sq ft, making it one of the largest office developments in Doncaster.

The scheme, created and managed by GMI Property Company, is among those leading the resurgence of Doncaster's economy.

Eamon Fox, of joint letting agents DTZ, said: "This is the finest office scheme in Doncaster and it is attracting the best of the region.

"Occupiers are demanding more from their buildings in today's market and this latest letting emphasises the quality of the product provided at South Quay.

"We have no doubt that the remaining building will not be on the market for long."
